GENERATION FACILITIES

The Long Island Power Authority (LIPA) will hold public briefings and hearings on LIPA's possible acquisition of KeySpan's on-Island generation, as provided for under a Generation Purchase Right Agreement (GPRA). The GPRA provides LIPA a one-time right to buy all of KeySpan Energy's on-Island electric generating facilities previously owned by LILCO. Following an extensive review that began in October 2000, LIPA staff and consultants recommended that LIPA "exercise its right" to purchase KeySpan's on-Island generation. All interested persons are invited to attend a meeting at which time information will be provided about the proposed acquisition of on-Island generation facilities. The LIPA Board of Trustees will consider the issue at its February 28 meeting.

Edit A Will Smith Movie, Sell Goats, Promote A Boxing Champion, Fuel Tankers

By Dan Rattiner

Last Monday evening, the kids said they wanted pizza, so I made a call and placed an order to go. There are many fine pizza places in the Hamptons, and the one that is nearest to my home, Pepperoni Pizza on Springs Fireplace Road, is one of them. I called up, ordered a large pie, one-half regular, one-half with chicken — I cannot explain this — and after about twenty minutes, went over to pick it up.

It was well after sunset, about 7 p.m. when I got there. Pepperoni Pizza is in the only small shopping center on Springs Fireplace Road, and in the darkness of that time of night, it was all lit up. Some of the other businesses still open in that shopping center at that hour were lit up too, including East Hampton Wines and Spirits, Springs Fireplace Video, and One Stop Market. All of the above are open until nine.

Next door to Pepperoni's, however, just beyond a dance studio, which was closed at that hour, there was a section of the shopping center all ablaze with light, a series of rooms with the blinds drawn and about fifteen cars parked outside. This place was, for many years, a pool hall known as Bailey's Billiards. Five years ago, however, it went through a remodeling. Now, there are no signs out front to indicate what this suite of rooms is. Just a number by the door, 243. Another car pulled up and some people got out and headed toward 243. As they opened the front door — I was walking out to my car carrying the pizza at that moment — there was the unmistakable roar of an alien coming from inside.

Well, I thought, the editing of Men in Black II is coming along. And they are working overtime, not necessarily because they are behind schedule, but because in Los Angeles it won't be five o'clock until eight o'clock here.

The people in this shopping center are delighted to have a film editing shop in their midst. When director Barry Sonnenfeld, who lives in Amagansett, has nothing on the fire, these offices have a skeleton crew. When Sonnenfeld has a movie in the works and doesn't feel like taking the red-eye to L.A. for this and that, the editing facility in this shopping center is packed with people. They go out for lunch and get sandwiches at One-Stop, they get coffee at Jessie's Bake Shop, they get supplies at the corner store. And when editing is in session, which it is right now, they stay late and order pizza from Pepperoni's, the delivery of which is about fifty feet, door to door.

The editing of a film is a huge undertaking, but there is no reason it can't be done in East Hampton and Sonnenfeld says he likes the commute. He opened for the editing of Wild Wild West, starring Will Smith. This movie didn't have as much luck in the theaters, but has had a strong rental income. Now they are busy editing Men in Black II, for which there is a poster on the wall in the lobby where you first walk in. The poster reads II. SAME PLANET. NEW SCUM.

They are in the final stages of the editing now. The film comes out in the summer of 2002. Sonnenfeld orders a second cut from one scene, two seconds added in another scene. The work is done on viewing machines and the monsters scream, though nobody outside has dropped a pizza yet.

With the Hamptons being such an attractive place to live, and with the advent of computers, there are now all sorts of people with international reputations living and working full time here. They don't have to go out to the world. They make the world come to them. Some of them work at home, some of them have offices.

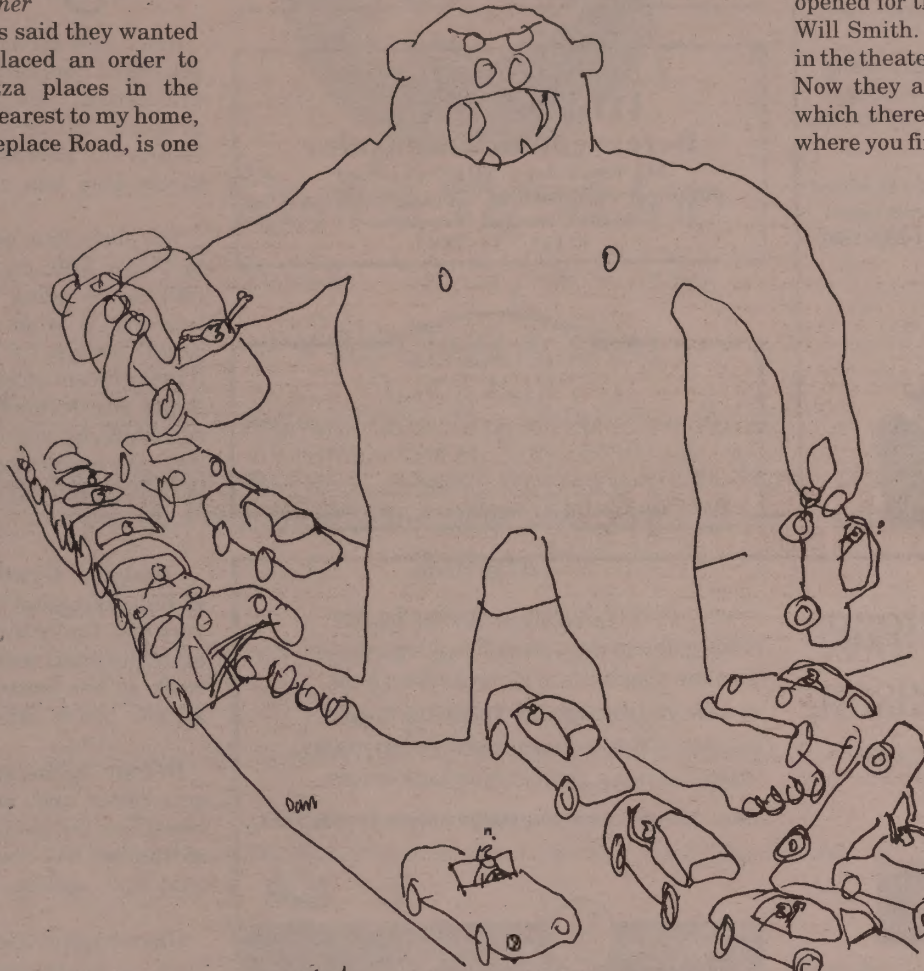

For example, there is an unusual office in Southampton in a former gas station where Hampton Road meets Route 27. On the north side of the street, at a building that for a long time housed the offices of the Four Seasons Greenhouse Company, there is now a non-descript sign with the letters C.K.P. on it.

What could this possibly be? The giveaway is the six-foot tall sculptures out front, which flank the front door. Each is an oversized boxing glove, raised in victory.

You have probably seen Cedric Kushner on television in the ring. He is a promoter, not Don King, but sometimes with a fighter facing Don King, and he has made a lot of money in the business. For more than a dozen years, he has made his home out in the Hamptons, in the woods of Northwest, and for a long time he operated out of offices in Manhattan or out of his home. He opened an office in Montauk for awhile, and now has his offices in Southampton.

What exactly does he do? Kushner has a knack for finding talented young fighters who have not yet been discovered and developing their talents and brokering their careers. He has had his champions, most recently Hasim Rahman, who was just deposed as Heavyweight Champion by Lennox Lewis, and Sugar Shane Moseley, the Welterweight Champion considered by many to be the opened the facility about five years ago, and he edited Men in Black there. Men in Black was a huge hit, grossing $200 million. Then this studio went into hibernation for a few months, then re-

Actor and director Ed Burns of Wainscott is getting an honorary doctorate from Hunter College this spring. He went to Hunter as an undergraduate but never finished, leaving just a few credits shy to launch his film career. They could surely give him credits for life experience.

The forty-four acre oceanfront estate Fordune, in Water Mill, on the market since 1999 at $35 million, is being sold to Brenda Earl. The property is what remains of about a 235-acre parcel bought by Henry Ford II and built as a magnificent private home for himself and wife Anne McDonnell back in the 1940s. It was subsequently sub-divided into the forty-four acre property containing the main house and four other parcels collectively and formerly known as Fordune.

Designer Cynthia Rowley was featured on E! Entertainment Television not only for her latest very hip, funky line of clothes but for her elegant all-white apartment. Don't know if all white would work at her house out here, though, what with all the beach sand.

Betsey Johnson is living proof that life only gets better and, in her case, more creative. Her latest line for the fall is filled with more and more of what we love about her. Color, more color, sexy, wild and ageless. How does she do it?

Christopher Gobler, Professor of Marine Science at Southampton College, reported in the prestigious Limnology and Oceanography that brown tide cells are eaten at a slower rate by zooplankton than other algal species, leaving the brown tide organisms free to dine on our scallops and clams. Dr. Gobler's findings are the result of a study conducted with students during the fall and winter of 1999, through a New York Sea Grant.

best pound for pound fighter in the world today, who lost last Saturday night, for the first time in his career, to Vernon Forrest.

What's inside the C.K.P. building? Secretaries working at desks with phones and computers, file clerks and posters on the walls of fights Cedric has promoted. Cedric has private offices in the back. That's it.

Have you watched something called Heavy-weight Explosion which comes on cable from time to time? That show, a whole evening of boxing events, is promoted by Cedric Kushner.

In addition to these two, there are many movie stars and rock stars who have their offices in the Hamptons. Some of them are in quite prominent locations, and I know where many of them are.

But I am not going to tell you. People who are chased around by paparazzi deserve some privacy.

There is a man I know living out here in Sag Harbor, George MacAuliffe, who makes his living by refueling tankers at sea. He does this at home, on a computer, arranging for this or that refueling ship to be linked up, and then getting a commission.

Once, not so long ago, I was selling advertising in Bridgehampton and, with my sales pack under my arm, went into the Sandford House on Main Street looking for new prospects. I went into one office and there was nobody there. Computers on, front door unlocked, a map on the wall with pins in it. I waited a bit but nobody showed up, so I snooped around, careful not to touch anything.

What I learned was that whoever ran this office was in the business of transporting goats and sheep from one part of the world to another. Making the decisions right here on Main Street in Bridgehampton.

I wondered how I could talk these people into an ad. Good to get your name around out here. There might be customers of yours who have homes out here. There are few goats out here. Could be a lot more.

There probably ARE people living out here who are looking to import goats and sheep into their factories in Japan and Hong Kong. Probably have homes right on the ocean.

I could tell them where to go, I thought. Then I left.

Chasing People Into The Right Aisles At The Water Mill Blockbuster Store

By Dan Rattiner

Blockbuster Video is introducing scents to their stores. Not all of their stores. Just some of them. They want to see how it goes. When you browse along the romance aisle, you get a whiff of roses. When you look at the selections in the action aisle, there is the scent of gunpowder. Head over toward check-out where they have the M&Ms, Malted Milk Balls and Baby Ruth bars and you smell vanilla.

Perhaps most interesting is the comedy aisle. In the comedy aisle you smell bananas. What this has to do with comedy is puzzling, but I've thought about it and I'm sure they have thought about it and what I've come up with is how funny it is to see a comic slipping on a banana peel in a pratfall. There is also the image of monkeys eating bananas, which is also kind of funny.

Anyway, since we have one local Blockbuster here in the Hamptons and it is in Water Mill, I drove over there the other morning to see if this is one of those fortunate stores to be offering the different scents in different sections.

I went right over to the Romance aisle. But on my way, I passed the Action aisle where, to my astonishment, I smelled bananas. There, reading the liner notes of The Perfect Storm, was a man eating a banana.

"You are in the wrong aisle," I told him. I took away The Perfect Storm, set it on the shelf and hustled him over into comedy where he belonged.

In the Science Fiction aisle there was a woman who smelled of garlic. I hadn't heard about any scent in Science Fiction but I am sure they are coming up with new ideas all the time and garlic seemed okay to me. She was looking at Aliens 3. I left her alone.

There was a man who smelled like he needed a bath in the Classics section and I knew that was wrong. I mean — Judy Garland, Cary Grant, Elizabeth Taylor — I hustled him right out onto the street.

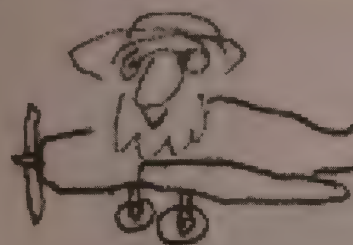

I don't know if they had vanilla at the checkout because the clerk there was drinking coffee from the Starbucks in Bridgehampton. Chances are greater than 50% that any coffee you get at Starbucks has vanilla in it somewhere. Anyway, it smelled like coffee with vanilla, maybe a little hazelnut and caramel, and I bought a Mounds bar, a container of Whoppers and some Raisinets. Then I left.

Heading back toward the office in Bridgehampton, I finished most of this stuff, and thought that in my excitement buying it I didn't even ask the clerk about whether or not they had special scents in the aisles which was very lousy reporting, but then that's what happens when you get a sugar rush.

To make up for this, I pulled into the mall in Bridgehampton to go to KMart. KMart has installed a special checkout counter that is completely automatic. No clerk. No HAVE A NICE DAY. No HERE'S YOUR CHANGE. Just you, what you bought, some bags, the bar code gun and some machine. From what I had heard, the way it works is, you zap what you bought with the bar code gun, then put the item in a bag at which point the machine compares the weight of the purchase — it got this from the bar code gun — to the weight in the bag. If it matches, it gets rung up. Then you can go on to the next item.

A woman named Liz was at the Customer Service Desk and the first thing she asked me was, did I know about the new All Day Blue Light Specials. This was a promotion that KMart had had in the 1980s and which they had brought back. Once an hour, they would push this blue police car light machine on wheels to one particular aisle or another — it might be where they kept roasted peanuts or small appliances — and they'd station an associate there — they call them associates — and at the top of the hour the blue light would flash and music would play and there'd be an announcement over the PA system that, for the next fifteen minutes, children's overalls were on sale two for the price of one — and everybody would come running over, pushing their shopping carts.

"Now we have Blue Light All Day Every Day," she said. "Today for instance, we have baby slippers on sale, two for the price of one. All day."

"Why the change?" I asked.

"It's better all day," she said.

What I figure is that, years ago, when they had Blue Light Specials at KMart, people would wait around happily and then rush over at the appropriate time and it created a lot of excitement. But that was then. Now people are after instant gratification. The hell with waiting for the Blue Light. They want what they want. Now.

"Tell me about this machine where you check things out yourself," I said.

"You mean Scott?" she asked.

"No, the machine," I said.

"Scott is the machine," she said. She explained. Scott stood for Scanned Check Out Terminal. She walked me over, and introduced us, explained to me how he worked, and then went off to take care of another customer.

Scott and I sized each other up, and I realized that if I wanted to see him strut his stuff, I would have to go up an aisle and buy something. And so that is what I did. I went to the clothing department, I picked out a pair of sneakers and then, just to try to screw him up, went to the pet department and picked out some tropical fish food. I took them back to Scott, scanned the sneakers, then scanned the tropical fish food, and Scott said PUT FIRST ITEM IN BAG and so I put the sneakers in the bag after which Scott made some k-chinging noise, which I took to mean the sneakers went through, and then I scanned the tropical fish food again and put that in the bag. It went k-ching again, presented me with an accurate bill, which I paid with my plastic KMart card, and left. It works.

I didn't have the nerve to put my finger on the scale to try to foul it up. Figured I would have set off the Blue Light, sirens would have gone off, and I would have gotten arrested.

Out in the parking lot, it occurred to me that I had no idea whether the sneakers I bought were men's or women's or what size they were. And I do not have tropical fish.

Well, the way I figure, it was an experience. I also think these purchases are reimbursable from the company. Expenses I incurred while writing the article. Travel and Entertainment or something.

THE SUNRISE HIGHWAY EXTENDS TO MONTAUK AND SOLVES ITS OWN PROBLEM

A Sea Of Cars

Videotaping Violators, St. Bernards, Handcuffing Tires And The Disabled

By Dan Rattiner

Every year, about sixteen million new automobiles are built in America. And every year about twelve million are retired, junked, crushed or disassembled in chop shops. This has been going on for twenty years. If you do the math, you can see that long ago we began to get up to our armpits in cars, and the sea is rising.

Which brings me to the topic of the day: where in the Hamptons to park them. Just in the last year, there have been three new developments in the where not to park them department. Last summer, the Village of East Hampton put ticket-spitting machines at the entrances to all its parking lots. To park in the lot, come to a halt at the machine, take the ticket that gets spit out at you and place it on your dashboard. Then park. The ticket would let you park for two hours.

The second development came last summer in both Southampton and East Hampton, where the owners of certain private parking lots decided they were sick and tired of everybody parking on their property ignoring the VIOLATORS WILL BE TOWED AWAY signs — it's too much of a bother to tow anybody away — and so they hired a company to put metal boots or handcuffs on the tires of illegally parked cars. Come back to your car and there is no way to move it unless somebody removes the boot. A man appears. Give him $217 and he will remove the boot. Do not give him $217 and your car just sits there. Sorry. And no credit cards, please.

Now there has been a third development. Southampton Town voted last month to hire disabled people, many in wheelchairs, to scoot around town in the various parking lots taking picture of it, including its license plate, and they bring it into police headquarters. An officer signs a ticket. The photographer co-signs it. It is mailed to the owner of the vehicle with a request for the amount of the fine, $50 plus a mandatory state surcharge of $30. According to Linda Gilmartin, director of the human services division in Southampton, many people in the disabled community are excited at the idea of joining the "Polaroid Posse." It will be an empowering experience, she said.

Ten years ago, there was a famous case on Southampton's Main Street where a woman parked her car all day, or appeared to park her car all day, in front of the Cardiere building, in a two-hour maximum parking space. The summer cops with the chalk would come by every two hours, mark her tires, but then two hours later they'd come back and the chalk mark was there, but up around the other side of the tire. The car had been moved. So they couldn't give out a ticket.

The police, tracing the license plate number, were able to determine the name and address of the woman who owned this car. They also learned that she had a proper disabled driver designation. But photographs of cars illegally parked in handicapped only parking spaces. The town is giving these people Polaroid cameras, orange jackets and code enforcement badges. They find a car parked in a handicapped only space, take a every day all day in the middle of summer right on Main Street? They felt she should give some other disabled person a chance.

So they set up video cameras to catch her. They set up one video camera in the tower on the southwest corner of Job's Lane and South Main Street, and another camera up in the belfry of the church on the southeast corner. And what they were able to find out was that every two hours she appeared out of the front of the storefront where she worked — she worked for Dean Witter — and she would walk carefully over to her car — she used canes — and then she would drive it around the block and park it again. Leaving the car, she would check the chalk mark on the tire to make sure she wasn't parking in a way that looked like she hadn't moved it. Then she would go back to work. There was nothing illegal about what she was doing. But it was shocking what the village had gone through to try to catch her.

All of this, of course, comes back to the auto industry, where they are producing sixteen million vehicles a year but only disposing of twelve million.

Who knows? Perhaps next year, you might find valet parking in our downtowns. They just instituted it in Greenwich, Connecticut. Or you might find St. Bernard dogs with cameras around their necks, sitting militantly alongside fire hydrants. There's an $85 fine for parking too close to a fire hydrant. But you knew that.

Statues

Putting Them Up, Taking Them Down, Messing With Their Heads, And Ours

By Dan Rattiner

There have been so many stories in the news in recent weeks about statues. In Brooklyn, the new borough president wants to remove all the busts, paintings and statues in Borough Hall, mostly of people like George Washington and Thomas Jefferson, and replace them with paintings and statues of Malcolm X, Rosa Parks and Ho Chi Minh. He feels that that would be more in keeping with the racial diversity of the people of Brooklyn.

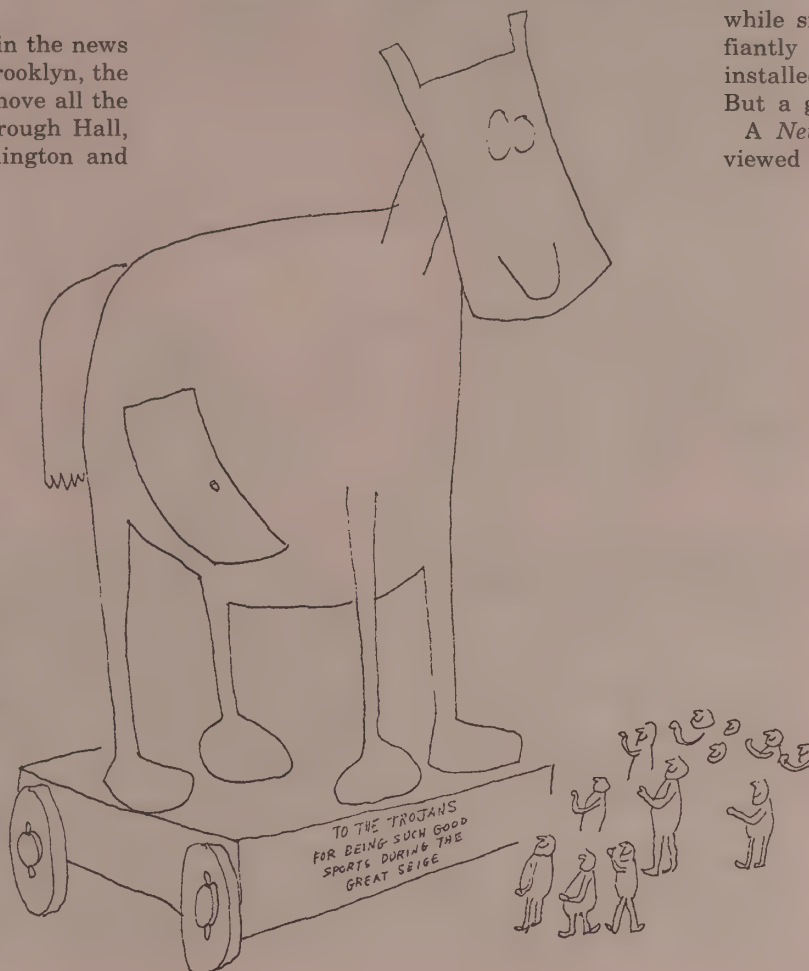

Six years ago, in an outpouring of good feeling, the people of Portugal offered to pay for a big statue in honor of Queen Catherine of Braganza, the Portuguese queen after whom the Borough of Queens is named, to be erected here. Claire Schulman, the longtime borough president of Queens, embraced that offer, and soon, after East Hampton sculptor Audrey Flack won a competition, a 35-foot tall statue of the queen, cast in bronze, was under construction in a foundry in upstate New York. It would take five years to build. Standing on its pedestal on the shore of the Queens side of the East River facing Manhattan, it would be the second tallest statue you would see coming into the harbor by boat.

But then, Al Sharpton spoke up objecting to the statue. The queen's family had been slaveholders. It would be an insult to the people of Queens to have this statue of her. And furthermore, her back was to the borough. Claire Schulman changed her mind. The statue would not be erected. Today, the almost completed statue lies in the Tallix Foundry in Beacon, New York. Its head is outside on a scrap heap.

And then there is the proposed statue of the three firefighters raising the American flag over the smoldering ruins of the World Trade Center. The National Organization for Women objects that none of the three firefighters in the proposed statue is female. That they were, and are, all young white men, very real, has been changed, of course. The sculpture has made them Hispanic, black and white. And after members of the FDNY objected to not sculpting the actual flag raisers, the project was cancelled.

While all of this is going on, there is an American sculptor hacking away in a studio down in Mexico City, completely oblivious to the things — changes — that are going on in America.

His name is John Houser, his father was an assistant to the sculptor who spent a lifetime completing all the Presidents on Mount Rushmore, and Mr. Houser is busy creating a bronze 40 foot statue of Don Juan de Onate, a Spanish explorer who, stabbing and shooting — he ordered that all the right feet of any of the Indians who opposed him cut off — came north from Mexico and settled what is now the American Southwest.

The tumbling down of the old statues by the new group coming in is a good thing. It does, for one thing, keep the statue population from growing and crowding us off the planet.

He is shown in full helmet and armor, brandishing a sword and looking into the middle distance, apparently for new worlds to conquer while sitting astride an Adalusian rearing defiantly on its rear legs. This statue is to be installed in El Paso, Texas, sometime in 2003. But a groundswell of opposition is growing.

A New York Times reporter recently interviewed Houser and asked him about the opposition. He brushed it off, declaring all this talk about Nazis and Indian butchers just a lot of new-age babble. Mr. Houser, I predict, is going to need the services of a good therapist. The phrase "snowball in hell" comes to mind when I think of whether this statue will go up or not.

So what is going on here? Well, the face of America is changing. Sometime in the next ten years, there will be more people from minority groups in this country than there will be those of Caucasian persuasion. And history has shown us that when a new group comes in, the statues of the old group get torn down. Happens every time.

Back in the 1970s and 1980s, we in America used to talk about the revisionist history being undertaken in the Soviet Union. School children were being told that Russians invented just about everything, that it was Russian explorers who discovered everything. Thomas Edison? Orville Wright? Johnny Come Latelies. The statues of the true inventors, forty feet high, were to be seen in town squares throughout the country. Russians all.

Back during those years, I visited the Buchenwald Concentration Camp, located in East Germany. The Nazis murdered about four hundred thousand people in that camp, about three-quarters of them Jews, the rest divided between Gypsies and Everybody Else. Among the Everybody Else were about 200 German Communists, advocates of the overthrow of the Nazi government and the replacement of it with a Soviet Communist State loyal to Moscow.

Well, when I visited Buchenwald, East Germany was being ruled by Moscow. And on the road up into the mountains overlooking Essen, where Buchenwald was, there was a massive forty foot tall statue of five representative Communists killed at Buchenwald. Heroes all. There were no monuments to anybody else.

Well, that statue has come down now. Statues all over the Soviet Bloc have come down. A new day dawns.

So what is a good cause to do a statue to? Well, a statue to a concept is a good thing. Out at Montauk Point a few years ago, a bronze statue to those lost at sea was put up.

Alec Baldwin: "The Artist As Activist"

Alec Baldwin is probably best known for his roles in films such as The Hunt for Red October, Prelude to a Kiss, Glengarry Glen Ross and Ghosts of Mississippi, but he also enjoys an active and vocal political life beyond the screen and stage. Last Thursday evening at Southampton College, he spoke in a casual, conversational format with Dean James Larocca about the role that he and other artists play as activists. Baldwin champions causes as disparate as animal rights and environmentalism, campaign finance reform and gun control, so he was happy to expound on issues both familiar and foreign.

Wasting little time with formalities, Dean Larocca launched the discussion with an issue that has been a hot button topic in elections for the past few years (and a favorite of Baldwin's), namely the problem with finance reform. Larocca knows the finance conundrum intimately, having run an under-financed campaign for governor of New York in 1998, and he was quick to highlight the inadequacies of our present system. Baldwin dissected the finance situation and came to the succinct conclusion that "cash is speech." He attributes the influence of big money on politics to situations such as the recent Enron debacle and laments the financial drain that fundraising imposes on politicians, who are forced to spend huge amounts of time lining the coffers for their future campaigns.

Moving beyond finance reform, Baldwin briefly explained that his motivation for becoming actively involved politically was driven by the fact that he "didn't always get off on acting." When prompted by Larocca to name a few films that he had found satisfying, both artistically and politically, Baldwin seemed to struggle to find a project that had served both his artistic and activist sides. He reminisced briefly about a conversation he had with political consultant, James Carvel (rendering perfectly the twang and bravado of Carvel's speech), when he was considering a run for congress. Carvel wisely instructed him that "when they want to pay you the money, take the money." Thus ended Baldwin's run for office.

With daily reports about the targeting of nuclear facilities by terrorists, the issue of nuclear power consumed a good portion of the hour and a half conversation. Baldwin has a nuanced position on nuclear power, saying that he opposes the present system only because of the way in which it is handled. He believes nuclear power to be a viable energy source and, assuming the safety of those near reactors could be assured and a sufficient means exists to dispose of waste, he thinks that nuclear power is an energy source that could be used to great advantage. This position revealed an activist who isn't bent solely on the protection of the environment at the expense of modern civilization and it underscored the very practicable side of Baldwin's activism. Here is someone that is willing to look for solutions that will work, while recognizing that any solution must account for the bigger picture.

Statues (Continued from previous page)

The figure, a man in a yellow oilskin, is portrayed holding onto the wheel of his boat, peering through a storm. He has a worried look on his face. It is a weather beaten face, could be black, white, Hispanic or Asian. Could be anybody. Nobody objected to that. People come to see it and feel concern and sadness about those lost at sea doing their jobs. But they also feel pride in the courage of the figure.

One could do a statue extolling the virtues of any one of the eight virtues — there are eight official virtues, aren't there? — compassion, helpfulness, fidelity, love. That's a few of them, I think.

In many ways, the tumbling down of the old statues by the new group coming in is a good thing. It does, for one thing, keep the statue population from growing and crowding us off the planet. Sort of like those fires that happen naturally in the woods to keep the undergrowth down. We could, otherwise, be swimming up to our waists in statues sometime down the road.

In fact, if you've ever been to Vienna, you know that they already are swimming with too many statues. You turn around and there's another one. They tie up traffic. Usually, they are of some grotesque twenty-foot monster with eight arms slaying a naked, muscle-bound but unrepentant sinner. A white man. They can scare the hell out of you on a dark night. The tumbling down of old statues also suggests that ALL history is revisionist history. Iwo Jima? If the Axis had won, there might be a statue showing the first Japanese landing on the Island of Attu in Alaska. This was the first piece of American soil taken over by a foreign power, or, to put it another way, liberated by a foreign power. But the Japanese held Attu only for about six months.

Statues, in my view, ought to be of one of the eight virtues, or the celebration of someone who engineered an indisputable and very good historical fact. The first man on the moon. The man who ended slavery. The man who invented the polio vaccine. (Name me a woman. Quick.) Otherwise, I suggest we make our statues of biodegradable materials — cardboard, for example. When their shelf life is up, they are either rebuilt, or sent off to the No Longer Good Idea Statue Park.

Old timers could go visit them.

By John Capone

It is an overcast day here on the East End, and Dava Sobel is gazing out the window, picturing a centuries old library in Florence, Italy.

"Imagine handling those papers," she said.

Imagine, indeed, stepping into a library in Florence and reading Galileo's scrawled handwriting in the margin of a letter sent to him by his daughter, a nun in a Florentine abbey, in the 17th century.

"When you hold those letters, remember who read them first," a Harvard mentor of Sobel's, who had done a great deal of work on Galileo himself, told her. Sobel says that it was just the right message to go to Italy with.

"That's one of the great things about letters. They are so personal, and they are the actual objects. They have things spilled on them. They are not just words. They are artifacts. It's very exciting," said Sobel, who came out to East Hampton twenty years ago and decided to stay and raise her two children there. These amazing letters are, in fact, the basis for Sobel's last two books, Galileo's Daughter and Letters to Father, the former of which enjoyed five weeks in the number one slot on the New York Times nonfiction bestseller list.

"I worked in a room at the library that contained all sorts of rare manuscripts from many periods, so everybody there always had something fascinating in their hands. Across the table someone might be holding an illuminated Bible from the twelfth or thirteenth century. Just an extraordinary, exquisite object," she said, her eyes glinting at the thought. Somehow, all these documents and artifacts have been preserved through centuries, and Sobel wonders how.

"I remember thinking, because I'd been to Pisa and seen how much of it was bombed during World War II, what spared this place? How come they didn't bomb Florence?"

Sobel started out as a freelance magazine writer and staff writer for Harvard Magazine and enjoyed success as a journalist before co-authoring Is Anyone Out There? with SETI (Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence) scientist Frank Drake.

"As a journalist, the idea of writing a whole book almost paralyzed me, but it turned out to be very rewarding," said Sobel. She had previously worked with Times Books, a division of Random House, and St. Martin's, before publishing Longitude with the small publisher, Walker, whom she describes as "quirky." Sobel calls the writing of Longitude, "my first real editing experience." Editor George Gibson, "was all over me about every word... it was very instructive." Sobel is still alarmed at the lack of editing and thoroughness that goes on at the large publishers.

"At the big publishers, my experience was that there was very little editing going on. On the book I did with Frank Drake I think they asked asked. But the whole field of radio astronomy — nothing."

Why did she switch to a smaller publishing house?

"There were far less fact checking questions (at the larger houses) than you get at a magazine, often to a shocking degree," she said.

Sobel knew Frank Drake and had lived some of the history in the development of the search for intelligent life with radio telescopes. She had been at Cornell and Arecibo (a radio telescope in Puerto Rico) and collaborated with Drake on the book. This is not UFOs and alien abductions, but rather the search for indirect communication from other intelligent beings.

"Extra-solar planetary systems are actually being discovered, and so far they don't really look anything like ours," said Sobel. "So maybe we are the only intelligent beings, a pretty hard idea to swallow."

The first draft of Galileo's Daughter, which contained about 100 of Maria Celeste's letters to her father, Galileo, was radically edited and reconceived by Gibson. Sobel said that she knew at the end of the first draft that the book wasn't really finished, but she still wasn't expecting the complete rewrite that she was asked for.

"I was devastated," she said, "but ultimately it was wonderful. It's a much better book. I think that if I had gone to a big publishing house somebody would have said, 'Well, okay, here's the book. Let's print it and put it out while people still remember Longitude.' And it wouldn't have been good, whereas George didn't care if it took another year. It had to be good. That's not what you expect from the book guys."

Gibson's dedication did not end there, however. Sobel recalls one reading for Galileo's Daughter in particular that he had encouraged her to attend. The problem was that the event was a month before the publication of the book and no one knew if any copies would be ready. He told her that the book would be there, "One way or another." In the end, Gibson rented a van himself and drove to Virginia and back to get the books there on time.

Sobel had already translated, from Italian to English, all of Maria Celeste's letters written between 1623-1633 and, after rewriting Galileo's Daughter, intended to make the complete translations available to students and the public-at-large on the Internet. But it became clear that there would be an audience for an annotated edition of the complete translations and the idea for Letters to Father was born. All the money made from sales of Letters will be donated to the Poor Clares, us four questions. And they just assumed that since my co-author was a scientist, that it was all correct. What they really worried about were a couple of comments about Timothy Leary. They worried about the legal aspects. 'Could we back up what we said about Timothy Leary?' they

which is the order that Maria Celeste belonged to and that still exists today, carrying on the same traditions. In the dedication, Sobel remembers one mother abbess in particular who filled in the gaps of a nun's daily life.

"That's what I needed. I needed that sense of moment to moment. I couldn't get it from the history books. I couldn't even get it from the letters because Maria Celeste doesn't talk much about the religious order."

Of Galileo, Sobel says, "I've been interested in him for a long time. Probably from reading Arthur Koestler's The Sleepwalkers, which is a non-fiction book about the history of astronomy. He really didn't like Galileo, so it's amazing that I came away from that book with such a passion for him." It is in this book that Sobel first read an excerpt from one of Maria Celeste's letters.

"Before that I'd heard of Galileo as a very romantic figure. Someone who stood up to authority and couldn't be controlled by prevailing opinion. And that appealed to me, probably because my father was that kind of character. Then when I found out Galileo had a daughter, I had all these feelings of familiarity — totally unjustified, but everybody comes to a story for a reason. It has to appeal to you, or you're not going to be able to stay with it."

When asked if her interest in Galileo might also relate to a desire to set the record straight, Sobel said, "All books have errors, and mine are no exception. There's a popular pool of knowledge about Galileo, everybody knows something about him, but most of what they know is wrong. They know that he was the enemy of the church. That he was the one who set up the division between science and religion."

There is a general misinformation in the public consciousness about Galileo, his life, and his deeds.

"That's what I knew about Galileo, too. That's why when I saw the letter from the daughter I was dumbstruck. Right then I could tell that everything I knew was wrong. That was a wonderful moment."

The first to translate all of the letters from Maria Celeste to her father, Sobel has found a window to new insights into the man.

"He was probably a good Catholic. From a modern perspective, you wouldn't think that someone who had such a revolutionary approach to science would have been an observant Catholic. It was so much more interesting to think of his doing what he did as a good Catholic."

Sobel firmly believes that a book about science can be poetic and literary. She is currently working on a general audience book on astronomy — a kind of biography of the planets, and is having trouble finding just the right tone for the book right now.

"I don't want it to read like a book of facts about the planets. I want it to be engaging, literary, and I want it to make sense to people who don't think about those things. That's hard to do."

Everyone knows Galileo is important. You don't have to convince them. Sobel tells me about a Henry James quote she recently read that resonated with her. "It takes a great deal of history to make a little bit of literature," James wrote. This is just the sort of quote that spins in on itself and at once refers to poetry, art, fiction and science that Sobel is so well-known for using in her work. You can tell she is having trouble with the book, she says, because she is still reading the Times everyday. Once she really gets rolling she will be so focused that she won't read anything that doesn't pertain to the book.

Although she loves the East End, the one thing she doesn't like is the lack of research facilities. As we all know, the local libraries are very nicely appointed as far as furnishings are concerned, but they are lacking when it comes to up-to-date printed material. Endowments seem to go more toward upgrading couches than books.

"You can sit there all day. People ask me if I use the library in East Hampton," she said. "I love the library, but I love it for renting videos."

Lately she's been thinking of endowing a book acquisition fund. She has been looking for a way to commemorate her parents and thinks that this might be appropriate.

It's been a gloomy few days here on the East End, but this doesn't dampen Sobel's spirits. As we head out into the mist, she says that she enjoys this weather, despite the gloom. •

By The Glass... With Susan Simm

Que Syrah Syrah

As a very young wine region, Long Island is still experimenting with grape varieties that may be unfamiliar to the island's average wine consumer. If you have expressed even a passing interest in Long Island wines, you most likely have heard of or tasted local chardonnays, cabernet sauvignons and merlots. Maybe even a dry riesling or a cabernet franc. But have you tried a local syrah? Or as they say Down Under, shiraz?

Martha Clara's 1999 Syrah is due to make its debut this March in the tasting room on Sound Avenue. A sneak preview revealed hints of blackberry and chocolate with a slightly tannic finish, which should smooth out with another couple months of bottle age. This is a very luscious red that promises great things if you are willing to cellar it and be just a little patient.

Martha Clara is also proud to announce that it is the first winery in New York State to join the Rhone Rangers, a non-profit, educational organization dedicated to advancing the knowledge and understanding of traditional Rhone grape varieties grown in America and the wines produced from those grapes, such as syrah and viognier. In addition, the 2001 Viognier, made from another somewhat obscure grape variety grown here on the North Fork in small quantities (the current vintage is sold out), is due to be released early this summer.

The Sydney Opera House as seen through two glasses of "shiraz"

Speaking of viognier, I tried Bedell Cellars 2000 Viognier over the past weekend and found it absolutely delightful. Aged in French oak barrels, the wine is soft and floral with melon aromas. Perfect with oysters and cold seafood, the wine would also pair well with delicate herbs such as tarragon and sage. Available at the winery on the North Road in Cutchogue for $19. Highly recommended. A nice change from the more traditional grape varieties, especially now that we are smack dab in the middle of shellfish season.

More news from Palmer Vineyards. The new North Fork Chardonnay replaces the Estate Chardonnay previously offered by the winery. Made from a blend of fruit both estate grown and purchased from local vineyards, the resulting wine is 50% stainless steel fermented and 50% barrel fermented, which produces a crisp style much sought after these days.

"This chardonnay shows the best of both worlds," said winemaker Tom Drozd. "The barrel portion lends a creaminess as well as weight and texture on the palate, while the stainless steel adds bright acidity and apple flavors. I like it as an apertif, and often sip it while cooking." According to a January 6 article appearing in the Sunday Times, the wine is a "successful straddle. Mr. Drozd gives fans of light, brisk, appley chardonnay plenty of the made-in-stainless-steel style they like, while also delivering the creamy-buttery-spicy character preferred by fans of barrel-fermented chardonnay."

And the wine is as easy on the purse as it is on the palate. Available at the winery for $9.99 a bottle, it's a bargain.

"This wine, along with our 41/72 Merlot Cuvee (reviewed here last week) is meant to be drunk as so many Europeans drink their wines, simply and unpretentiously to wash down good food," said Tom.

With Valentine's Day just around the corner, the Long Island wine industry is participating in a "Wine & Romance" Weekend this Saturday and Sunday, February 9 and 10, in honor of this holiday celebrating love. Activities such as raffles for lovers, classical music, wine sales, cellar tours and more will be held at these participating wineries: Bedell Cellars, Castello di Borghese/Hargrave Vineyard, Corey Creek Vineyards, Galluccio Estate Vineyards/Gristina Winery, Jamesport Vineyards, Macari Vineyards, Martha Clara Vineyards, Osprey's Dominion Vineyards, Palmer Vineyards, Peconic Bay Winery, Pellegrini Vineyards, Pindar Vineyards, Channing Daughters (Bridgehampton), Duck Walk Vineyards (Water Mill) and Wölfer Estate (Sagaponack).

Details of individual activities can be found on the Wine Council's website at www.liwines.com

Dan's North Fork

Sexy Spots

By Joshua May

Following a rigorous search through historical and contemporary documents, it has been concluded that the North Fork has never been favorably compared to Paris in spring. This is clearly an oversight and a casually planned romp through the area on Valentine's Day is sure to provide as much pleasure and romance as any sunset viewed in the shadows of Notre Dame followed by a nice bottle of wine and dinner in the Latin Quarter – well, almost.

Any well-planned Valentine's Day is sure to be free of a rigid schedule; there must always be the opportunity to throw off your clothes and make wild passionate love at your whim. With that caveat in mind, there are some great spots on the North Fork to wine and dine, feast or fast and generally just have a good time with that special someone. For those who believe more is better, see how many of these spots you can hit; for the esthetes, try and hit at least one, it'll be worth it.

As the sun goes down, the night will heat up, but to catch the last rays of light head to Horton's Point in Southold for a little pre-dinner handholding. Many a torrid romance has been launched by the tangy taste of a Cosmopolitan and many more are fueled to greater heights by a few sultry sips. At Bay and Main in Greenport they have mastered the Cosmo, which will surely stoke the fires of your desire.

A couple of drinks should whet your appetite and put you in the mood for some food. Coeur des Vignes in Southold is the perfect spot for an intimate dinner for two with a nice bottle of wine from their ample cellars. Or head to the Seafood Barge for oysters on the half shell and champagne by the glass, while staring out at Peconic Bay and into each other's eyes. If the aphrodisiac effects of oysters aren't your style then chilies are rumored to work just as well. The Amazon Grill in Mattituck serves up a bevy of delights that will spice up more than your dinner. If dinner out isn't as appealing as dinner in and your skills in the kitchen lean more towards the ability to burn than the ability to bake, then stop into Salamander Café in Greenport for some take-out. They have marinated duck breast, caviar and many other treats that will warm you up.

After dinner, if you can resist the urge to rush home, take a spin on the carousel in Greenport and then have a latte and dark chocolate dipped hazelnut biscotti at Aldo's across the street. If going around in circles isn't your idea of fun, stop at Town Beach on North Road in Southold to stargaze, steam up the windows and remember what it was like to be in high school.

When you do head home, you'll want to slip into something sexy. Cottage Rose in Baiting Hollow has a wide selection of slinky satins and silks for everyone who's naughty and nice. And it's not just the ladies who can shop here, the guys have plenty to choose from as well. If you're feeling lucky in love you should stop into the Love Lane Sweet Shop in Mattituck for some Godiva chocolates. As if the chocolate wasn't enough, every Valentine's Day Godiva has a contest with jewelry for the winners. This year's top prize is a four and a half carat diamond ring from Harry Winston. Love Lane has had winners in the past so stop in and keep their down the beach from their respective homes. Betsy had lived out there for just eleven months, lucky enough to have a best friend living across the street and who had seen the "For Sale" sign go up. It was a hot, sunny, August day. Betsy was teaching a friend how to kayak, while Chris wandered by picking up beach glass. "Hmm. I've got to meet him," Betsy announced to her friend. Fifteen minutes later, Betsy and Chris were swapping beach glass stories and she learned that he had spent almost every summer out here with his grandparents and parents. Southold seemed to hold the same special place in his heart as it did in hers. But they parted not too long after they started talking. Fate, however, had other ideas. They literally bumped into each other while kayaking later that same night. Paddling led to beers and to another five hour paddle later that week, to Labor Day weekend parties that led to a phone call on the following Tuesday (when she was told he would never call so soon), to a dog named Nami (Japanese for wave), to an apartment on the upper West Side (where Chris would have never before lived) and to a wedding date. The couple will be married on March 2, 2002 in The Garden City Community Church.

Sensual Gift Giving For Your Special Valentine

You know, I really think a women's favorite day of the year, including her birthday or anniversary, is Valentine's Day. Valentine's Day spells ROMANCE... And you can always expect the unexpected on this special day. I have found some sensual and unusual gifts (not the run of the mill lingerie, candy, etc.), for the special lady or man in your life and to top it off, they are really affordable.

Slightly Naughty Weekend Kit - $62

Toss this in the overnight bag and turn a romantic weekend for two into an ever-so-slightly naughty escapade. This exclusive kit includes a velvet blindfold, a feather tickler and angelic body dust, tender kissing glaze, fragrant bath salts, vetiver massage oil and flower garden soap. There's also a scroll, in case you need any helpful suggestions for using the ingredients. It's made in England and the box measures only 7" x 9 3/4".

Sensual Massage - $60

Put the romance back in and take the stress out. Perfect for a romantic getaway, the beautifully illustrated Joy of Sensual Massage has step-by-step instructions for different massage techniques from Swedish to Shiatsu. To make things go smoothly, a geranium and lavender massage oil known for its anti-stress and harmonizing properties has been added. Sensual Massage comes in a beautiful linen envelope.

Japanese Bath Kit - $48

Send them to an "onsen" spa with our Japanese bath kit. Packed in a woven box, the kit arrives with natural seaweed soap, a scrub mitt and mineral salts for soaking. A bamboo cup for rinsing, incense and candle complete the experience. A detailed history of and guide to the Japanese bath is included.

Chocoholics Body Frosting - $28

If subtle is what you want, keep looking. But if you're seeking something sinful, this is it. Body frosting in chocolate, strawberry, and what else? Passion fruit, of course. With two paint brushes, for twice the fun. A

Cinéma Romantique

There is nothing more comforting and romantic than cold winter nights, a few great DVDs and a nice warm fire. Regardless if you are with your Valentine, a few friends or by yourself, a romantic film is something that is sure to fill your heart with warm emotion. There are so many beautiful films made about love that it is worth taking time this winter to catch up on some of the best.

The romantic comedy has always been around, but in the past fifteen years actresses like Julia Roberts and Meg Ryan have taken the genre to a new level. When Harry Met Sally (1989), starring Meg Ryan, raises the classic question – can men and women just be friends? And Julia Roberts just wowed us in the modern day Cinderella story, Pretty Woman (1990). Other greats include The Graduate (1967), starring the incomparable Hamptonite Anne Audrey Hepburn in Sabrina (1954)

Bancroft, Working Girl (1988), Roman Holiday (1953), with the ever-charming Audrey Hepburn, Annie Hall (1977), Sabrina (1954) and So I Married an Axe Murderer (1993). Not only will you and your Valentine have fun watching these cuddly classics, but you will have quoting material for weeks!

Another steamy modern classic is Shakespeare In Love (1998), the story of Shakespeare (portrayed by Joseph Fines) as he falls in love with Viola De Lesseps (Gwenyth Paltrow) which catapults his writing to new levels. A Room with a View (1986), is a beautiful British film about a young girl swept away by a brief encounter in Florence.

But no one knows amour like the French do. French films really illustrate passion and, coupled with the beauty of the language, French cinema has turned the love story into an art form. Red (1994), Blue (1994), and White (1994) are a trilogy of films by Krzysztof Kieslowski, each film titled after a color of the French flag. Jules and Jim (1962), a classic example of the beauty of the French New Wave, is a wonderful story of a love triangle between two men and their estranged love for actress Jeanne Moreau.

Some Spanish romance films include Like Water for Chocolate (1993), Open Your Eyes (1997), and All About My Mother (1999).

Other timeless American romances include: Breaking the Waves (1996), Out of Africa (1985), An Affair to Remember (1957), Sliding Doors (1998), Great Expectations (1998), Stealing Beauty (1996), Gone with the Wind (1939) Breakfast at Tiffanys (1961) Butterflies are Free (1972) Casablanca (1943) and Love Story (1970).

As much as anything else, Films have shaped our notion of what romance should be. So to get your Valentine in the mood for love, try one or many of these classics. After all, don't they say that "Life imitates art?"

Valentine

"tasteful" invitation for a little good clean fun. It comes in a set of three jars.

Chopsticks For Two – $40

Dim the lights, brew the green tea, and get the kung pao ready. A stylish take on tradition, these stainless steel chopsticks make take-out an elegant meal for two. If you really want to impress, break out the wok and do the stir-frying at home. The set includes two pairs of polished stainless steel Chinese-style chopsticks, two stainless chopstick rests, and a handsome black plantation wood box. Also, a personalized lid with a one to three initial monogram.

Gourmet Body Paint – $28

Body paint in chocolate, strawberry and creamy caramel. It's a "tasteful" invitation for a little good, clean fun. The set includes two paintbrushes. Set of three 10-oz. jars.

Erotic Fortune Cookies – $25

Fortunes that say what's really on your mind. Guaranteed to add some heat to your next stir-fry, each crispy cookie comes with a racy version of the traditional fortunes everyone loves. (One of our favorites: "Someone is thinking kinky thoughts about you.") Spring it on someone you fancy and see if your fortune comes true. Made in San Francisco, where the original fortune cookie was invented. Twenty-four individually-wrapped cookies in a take-out container.

Seduction + Spice – $39.95

Play Cupid in the kitchen – this aphrodisiac cookbook is sure to ignite the flames of passion. Master Chef Rudolf Sodamin has cooked up 130 wickedly delicious recipes that simmer with sensuality and promise to stimulate the senses. With beautiful and tantalizing photographs, the 194 page book arrives seductively dressed in smooth red velvet.

Speak Love, Make Love – $25

The first rule of this board game is "do not read the game board before you play." We won't spoil the surprise, but suffice it to say, it's designed for two players. The unique two-sided board allows couples to play a "romantic game of giving and receiving" that artfully melds thought and feeling with sensual pleasure. And while it is all fun and games, "Speak Love, Make Love" is also designed to foster better communication for a happier relationship. (Recommended for ages 18 yrs.+)

Roses + Heather – $65

Set the scene with this classic romantic gift that is given a twist. One dozen long stem roses are interspersed with stalks of heather for a stunning red-on-red bouquet.

Velvety Ecuadorian roses arrive in bud and within a few days open to show off their gorgeous, long-lasting blooms. Overnight shipping only.

Azalea Bonsai – $45

East meets West with this twist on an ancient art. The exuberant azalea, native to the American South, has been tamed into an exquisite 10" tall bonsai sporting pink blossoms and glossy green leaves. The Japanese keep bonsai in ceramic pots, but azaleas thrive when replanted outdoors in warm climates, where it will eventually return to its full size. The pot measures 7" x 5 1/4" x 3 1/2" high.

Rum and Black Cherry Truffles – $24

Talk about following your bliss. These truffles are handmade by a husband and wife team who turned in their corporate badges and moved to a remote tip of the Iveragh Peninsula in Ireland to do what they were obviously born to do. Now, their new job descriptions include personally mixing and testing each decadent batch before it heads out the door. Their hand painted cylinder-shaped box arrives with 7.5 oz. (12-14 pieces) of all-natural dark chocolate truffles filled with rum and black cherries. A nice way to end the evening!

Have a happy Valentine's Day with that special person in your life. Enjoy!

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Wow! Let's give this weather a hand! Before you know it, we will be in our bathing suits! Love to shop without the wind blowing in my face. So let's do some shopping!

Valentine's Day is only a week away and there are lots of great ideas out there to choose from. Pocket Pups, located in Westhampton, is the perfect gift for that perfect love in your life. As part of the Harley's Angels Professional Dog Training, Jenna Robbins is now a breeder representative and can find you the perfect pet that you can really fit in your pocket or pocketbook...No kidding! Her Murphy dog is full grown at 2 1/2 pounds. I want one to take shopping with me. Call for information at 631-653-3955.

East Hampton's Eclectic Design located in the stylish breezeway at 47 Newtown Lane is celebrating its fourth season. This store just received a truck load of new home accents, ranging from furniture, lamps, pillows, antiqued urns and great English bell jars. Remember Eclectic Design specializes in interior design and they can help you complete the project down to the last detail. They also have wonderful home accessories that would make any house cozy and beautiful. Stop by and take advantage of their wonderful selections. You will love them!

Next on my list is Island Surf on Main Street in Sag Harbor for some great buys. All their women's, men's and children's outerwear, skiing and surfing clothing (and more) are slashed 50% to make room for their new inventory. Deals are always being made at Island Surf, never hesitate to ask! I love shopping here for my sons, Joe and Randy, ahem, they love when I shop here too, I almost never leave empty handed.

At Devonian, there is a special sale with 50% off selected pillows, 15% off all rugs in stock, 20% off all canvas prints and everything else in the shop is 10% off if you mention this column. Kim has to make room for all brand new merchandise. So hurry, this super stuff will be flying out the door.

Right across the street at Satori, there is a sale with 40% off. Look for great women's clothing, shoes, sterling jewelry and accessories. Love this shop!

Nearby at Andrew & Company, known for their great selection of children's clothing, is having their annual sale going on right now. Stop in and check it out!

Don't pass Gallery of Accent without stopping in to check out their sales, sales, sales! Great gift items for everyone in your life. I picked up a great suncatcher for my mom and she loves it. There is so much to choose from, you probably will walk out with a shopping bag full!

Also at the Headley Studio & Generous Fashions on Madison Street in Sag Harbor they are offering a scarf with red and white hearts printed in a beautiful pattern throughout, a red enamel fired heart-shaped pin, "I Love Mom" pin (with the word "love" in a heart shape with a stone). Look for funky fun door-hanger pillows that say: "Men Wanted," "The Queen Rangers," "Princess," etc., a love spell book and a guessing board game that is called "Who Will be My Lover." Open weekends in February from noon to five.

Want a dinner deal for Valentine's Day evening? At the Paradise Café on Main Street in Sag Harbor they are offering a special dinner: Prix-fixe $35 dinner, which includes any appetizer, entrée and dessert off the regular menu and the evening specials are offered. In addition a complimentary glass of wine is included for all that make their reservations in advance. Call 725-6080 for reservations and information..

While you're in Sag Harbor stop in at the Style Bar Day Spa for a gift certificate for the sweetie(s) on your list. There is a full service program including massage, manicure, pedicure, hair styling and tons of high end, upscale beauty products. Call 631-725-6730.

Off the beaten path, Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyards are offering a few specials for Valentine's Day. At Bedell Cellars on Main Road in Cutchogue, they will be featuring specials on their Raspberry Wine. Bedell's Raspberry wine is reminiscent of Chambord, tasting like tart liquid raspberry jam, the wine can be sipped as a cordial and is simply super on ice cream, cheesecake, fresh berries, or anything chocolate.

At Corey Creek Vineyards on Main Road in Southold, there are three wine and romance packages available now through Valentine's Day. The three amorous packages include classic Long Island wines and delectable Fifth Avenue chocolates. Packages range from $18.80 to $24.40 at both vineyards.

Have a wonderful romantic Valentine's Day. Until next week. Ciao and Happy Valentine's Day Shopping!

CLASSIC CARS BY BOB GELBER

BIG CARS

To be honest, this article is biased because I really dislike big cars. I just think that it's a gross waste of metal, rubber and other natural resources, including gasoline. In most cases, I see only one person being transported in 5,000 pound SUVs and large passenger cars.

What makes things really bizarre is that people are buying larger, wider and higher automobiles not because they really want them, but because there is such a preponderance of behemoths on the roads that people are scared to drive anything small anymore.

BMW is introducing their newly designed Mini next year and I genuinely wonder if they will attain anticipated sales figures. The car is small, although not as tiny as the original Mini, which was a sales disaster here in the States because it was so diminutive. Let's face it, it wasn't called a "Mini" for nothing!

Let me also state that I'm not a tree hugger in the strictest sense of the term, because I certainly appreciate certain gas-guzzling equipment like hot engines, ocean racing boats and airplanes. The only rational here is that there are less of these energy guzzlers as compared to passenger vehicles, which are sold in the millions.

I have to admit the SUV has many appealing traits. You sit high and have a commanding view of the road, and you certainly feel safer in such a large piece of iron. However, the negative aspect of these vehicles, which the auto makers downplay, is the fact that most SUVs handle horribly. The very fact that you are sitting up high means that "the roll center" is much higher than in conventional passenger cars. ("Roll center" actually means the point where the car will roll over!) There's a reason great handling sports cars are "low slung," they have very low roll centers. In fact, most sports cars are very difficult to rollover — unless you hit a curb sideways.

Truth be told, if you get into an accident in an SUV, the odds are good that you would suffer less physical injury than in a small car. But, due to its handling and poor the most desirable and worth the most money. The one exception to this rule is the wooden stationwagon. These beautiful big cars are unique because of the extravagant woodwork on their bodies. In today's world of knock-'em-out production, it would be impossible to make a mass-produced, wooden-bodied automobile at reasonable cost. At one time I owned three collector woodies, a '37 Ford, a '47 Ford and a '51 Ford. (I sold the '51 to Roy Lichtenstein).

The desirable cars of the '50s and '60s are smaller vehicles. The '57 Chevy, the Corvette and the '65 Mustang, as well as the GT-350, are relatively nimble machines when compared to other cars that were in production at the time. Let's face it, the Buicks and Oldsmobiles of the period were barges when compared to the collector cars.

It was during this period that the Volkswagen Beetle was introduced to America. I've always felt that part of its success was because it was small and nimble. It offered an alternative to "The Yank Tanks," British jargon for our products at the time.

I'm not proposing that every American should run out and buy a Fiat or Vespa motorscooter and pretend they live in Italy, where gasoline costs $5 per gallon. What I am saying is that we should pare down the size of cars we are buying. A Ford Expedition or a Lincoln Navigator is a ridiculously large vehicle. Will they ever be collector cars? Probably not.

Perhaps the marketing of the Mini next year will mark a rebirth of sanity here in America. I hope they sell like hotcakes and lead the way to smaller, safer, better handling and sensible cars. Hooray for Mazda Miatas, Porsche Boxsters, Volkswagen Golfs, Toyota Corollas and all the other small cars of the world. Don't let the big guys bully you.

maneuverability in an emergency situation, you would be more prone to get into the accident in the first place.

In the world of vintage collector cars, it seems the vote also goes to small cars. With the exception of the pre-WW II grand classics like the Duesenberg, Packard et al, most of the valuable and highly desirable collector cars today are small vehicles. The most valuable are vintage race cars and some little vintage racing Ferraris, Porsches and Alfas are worth millions of dollars.

In the world of "everyman" collector cars, the same is true. Large four-door sedans simply don't cut it. It's the coupes, hardtops and especially the convertibles that are

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

This flick got mixed reviews. In his New York Post review, Jonathan Foreman stated: "Perhaps no movie could do Muhammad Ali justice. However, this over-long but sketchy biopic by Michael Mann, in which style repeatedly tramples substance, actually does the great man a disservice." I found it to be a wonderful film. It held my interest, made me laugh and, on occasion, I was teary-eyed.

Will Smith's portrayal of Ali is superb. He has Ali's voice and inflections down pat. The fight scenes are magnificent and appear totally authentic. I believe Muhammad Ali, born Cassius Clay, is one of the most recognized names in the world. I met him at City Hall in the '80s. He was already suffering from a physical condition, which most would have simply described as punch drunk and delayed in his reactions. Today, we know that he suffers from Parkinson's disease. A doctor who saw the movie with me said that brain trauma as a result of boxing is one recognized cause of the disease. Notwithstanding his powerful body, the beatings he took and his history as a killer in the ring, he was, and remains, a beautiful man. That description applies not only to his face but his spirit as well.

Ali had five wives and three of them are presented in this movie: Sonji Roi (Jada Pinkett Smith), Belinda Boyd (Nona M. Gaye) and Veronica Porsche (Michael Michele). Each of them was a distinct personality and the actors portraying them did a good job showing why Ali loved them and why their marriages ended.

The final battle in the ring between George Foreman and Ali in Zaire, then led by the corrupt tyrant President Mobutu, was beautifully choreographed, as were the scenes of Ali training in the streets. I met Mobutu at City Hall when I was mayor, at the request of the U.S. State Department. He arrived wearing his leopard cap and carrying a fertility stick. During that visit to New York, he paid the Congo's U.N. Mission bill owed to local merchants, which had gone unpaid for many years. Gillian Sorensen, my Commissioner to the U.N., made the case to Mobutu on behalf of the merchants who had not been paid.

The film brings to life the friendship between Ali and Malcolm X (Mario Van Peebles) as well as the close bond that Ali had with his trainer Angelo Dundee (Ron Silver). Few old enough to have heard Ali's phrase "float like a butterfly, sting like a bee," will ever forget or quarrel with that description of himself.

The U.S. criminal proceedings brought against Ali for refusing to serve in the Vietnam War and his embattled defense as a conscientious objector, marks the period in his life when he was first reviled by the American public. The scene when he learns that he has been exonerated by the U.S. Supreme Court in the appeal before them is spell binding. Had he lost, he would have gone to jail for five years.

A superb performance is given by Jon Voight who plays the sportscaster Howard Cosell. Apparently there was a truly close friendship between Ali and Cosell and always a great banter between them when they were together. Voight is totally unrecognizable physically. Although not a perfect physical match for Cosell, he brings his personality and voice to life.

Don King, promoter of the Zaire fight known as the "Rumble in the Jungle," is played by Mykelti Williamson. I know Don King and in real life he is much funnier than portrayed and his hair is even more distinctive than shown.

All in all, Ali is a picture worth seeing.

Before Ed Koch was a movie critic for Dan's Papers he was the Mayor of New York.

in The Hamptons

There ain't nuttin' like a good, kooky spook movie. When they're good, they're deliciously tingling like a rhubarb pie. When they're bad, they lay in your stomach like a too floury latke - forcing me to bellyache about them. I bellyache because here in the winter ho-hum Hamptons we need a good, theatrical scare now and then. But the scary movie genre is as vaporous as the phantasmagorical spirits they toy with.

The Mothman Prophecies definitely ain't a good one. The initial scare is the fact that Richard Gere stars in it, which quickly wears off. Director Mark Pellington (Arlington Road) tries hard to make an all-powerful purveyor of doom, gloom and BOOM out of a moth person/specter/now-you-see-him-now-you-don't/thing-a-ma-red-eyed-concocter of red herrings. Most of the herrings died a long time ago, so the movie reeks of foul desperation.

Since the movie is spun of flimsy, prefabricated cloth, it is full of holes - the holes being made by the Mothman himself - gnawingly annoying in this woolly tale with a disastrous (in more ways than one) final, moth-eaten curtain. There isn't a thing in the movie that can't be taken care of by a box of Kmart Martha Stewart Camphor Balls. There! My tummy's a lot better now.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE ART SCENE FAR FROM THE HAMPTONS PART V: NEW YORK

It somehow seems appropriate to conclude our art scene series with a return home. There is no place like New York, after all, especially since September 11. And that goes for the art as well. Sometimes it's good and sometimes it's bad. But it is all ours.

Various art forms have responded, directly or indirectly, to the terrorist attacks. Several recent films, videos and one theater piece are particularly potent; they too, have brought an important message home. All the examples take an anti-war position spanning several decades, including the Bosnia-Serb and Afghanistan conflicts.

The film Khandahar was made before the current war and is a remarkable account of a real life woman (Afghan-born, Canadian raised), who returns to Afghanistan to rescue her ill sister living in Khandahar. As such, the work is both fiction and non-fiction: the lead actress is played by the actual woman. The shots are exquisite as she travels through the desert, receiving help and encountering hindrances along the way. The dialogue and characters seem authentic, the events (like a Muslim wedding party) ring true. The film is closer to stylized realism.

The brilliant colors and compositions heighten reality.

What makes the film's style extraordinary is the Surrealism that occurs when planes drop prostheses to the ground for patients at the Red Cross Hospital. The effect and editing sequence is as moving as grotesque, recalling scenes from Bunuel's Los Olvidados.

The narrative is similarly surprising: we never know if the woman reaches her sister or if she is jailed. The film turns on itself and the end is like the beginning.

No Man's Land, a film which takes place during the Bosnia-Serb War, is more straightforward with a clear beginning, middle and end. While there are no stylistic discrepancies, there exists the same frustration and stupidity of war and, oddly enough, the film does not take sides: both factions are equally wrong, including the peace-keeping mission staff and the various generals. This self serving attitude brings to mind Kubrick's Paths of Glory.

Three men from opposite sides are trapped in a neutral area, one soldier is lying on mine. The other two are enemies, now uneasy and suspicious allies waiting to be rescued by the peace-keeping mission.

The plot is not sentimental slop, however, the men do not become friends, although there are moments of mutual compassion. The ending when they are rescued is not sentimental either, but a bit expected. War is such a waste.

Daughter of a Pacifist Soldier by Tamar Rogoff is a third anti-war piece presented to perfection at the La Mama Theater. Like the film Khandahar, the live presentation is both fact and fiction based on the letters written by the authors parents during World War II. The real daughter (and actress) provides the focus and continuity as she reads the correspondence.

The narrative structure is not linear but composed of vignettes: letter readings, personal testimony by veterans of various wars, interpreted through dance and enacted flashback sequences from the letters. The presentation is a fascinating mixed media work featuring movement and sound montages.

Another anti-war piece confronts September 11 head-on. It is a video by Evan Fairbanks now at the New York Historical Society. Part of an exhibit by Magnum Photographers, the work is a documentary "you-are-there" account of the day's events. It appears to be edited in the camera, but perhaps not. While there are the usual interviews and shots of the burning Twin Towers, there is a Surrealism, too, that makes this video different. The Towers provide the continuity, always at the center, like the "character," that it is.

The videos end with a close-up of the Towers exploding. We explode, too.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Parties and people are nice but we rarely think of simply entertaining ourselves. A certain amount of planning can smooth the way for a simple, romantic dinner. A young couple I know in Manhattan, who love to cook, will set a table with their finest china, crystal and silver over stunning gilt-edged place mats and colorful candles. They may go overboard with the food but it doesn't have to be a sumptuous repast, just a little soft music, a glass of champagne and a dish or two that can be fun to cook together.

Begin by cooking a sweet for each other to be enjoyed later. A crepe batter is an easy mix of flour, eggs, milk, water and salt. When the batter is ready, you can take turns lading the mixture into a small non-stick skillet or crepe pan, rotating the pan off heat to force the batter into a thin pancake. A batch of crepes takes virtually minutes to make. Stack them lacy-side down to be filled or folded and sauced with a sweet concoction such as lemon curd or a chocolate sauce that can be prepared days ahead.

Since I have a passion for risotto, a dish that in Italy is served only as a first course, I like to make it the star of the show. A certain amount of preparation can be done ahead, but you can share stirring at the stovetop while sipping champagne. La Risolata, a risotto made with Romaine lettuce and chopped vegetables, brings back delicious memories of Florence, Italy where I first tasted it at Trattoria La Baraonda. Fondly recalling happy memories is what romance is all about. Here is my version for two. Happy Valentine's Day.

LA RISOLATA

From Trattoria La Baraonda in Florence, Italy. The vegetables may be pulsed in a food process until evenly chopped. Serves two.

- 1 small or half bunch fresh Romaine lettuce
- 1 small red onion
- 1 large celery stalk, trimmed and thoroughly washed
- 1 medium carrot, scraped
- 2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 tablespoon unsalted butter
- Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 1 1/4 cup arborio rice
- 4 1/2-5 cups chicken broth, homemade or canned low-sodium
- Plus:
- 1 tablespoon unsalted butter
- 3-4 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese
- Tiny inner leaves of romaine for garnish, optional
- 1. Remove and discard the outer green leaves of the lettuce, cut the remainder into very thin strips and soak in a bowl of cold water for 30 minutes.

2. Meanwhile, peel, trim and wash vegetables, as needed, and finely chop them. Or cut the onion, celery stalk and carrot into chunks and pulse the ingredients together in a food processor. Be careful not to overchop the vegetables.

3. Place a medium-sized casserole, such as Le Creuset or a heavy saucepan with the oil and butter over medium heat. When the butter is melted add the chopped ingredients and saute for 4-5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Meanwhile, drain the lettuce and add it to the casserole. Cover and cook for 2 minutes, stirring with a wooden spoon. Season with salt and pepper, then add rice to the mixture and saute, stirring occasionally, for 3-4 minutes.

4. Pour the broth in a saucepan and place on a burner next to the casserole with the rice. Bring the broth to a boil then adjust heat to a simmer. Start adding the broth to the rice, 1/2 cup at a time, stirring constantly, adding more broth only when previously added liquid is completely absorbed. Cook the rice, adding 1/2 cup of liquid as needed until the rice has a creamy texture yet firm to the bite. Taste for salt and pepper, then add the butter and Parmesan cheese and stir to mix. Serve at once on warm dinner plates, garnished with a tiny leaf of Romaine lettuce, if desired

CREPES WITH CHOCOLATE SAUCE

Fold the crepes into quarters, lacy side down and serve with a sweet chocolate sauce that can be refrigerated for up to a week. Leftover crepes may be frozen.

For two or more.

For the crepes:

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon unsalted butter

For the chocolate sauce:

- 3 ounces semisweet chocolate, finely chopped
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar
- 1/3 cup heavy cream

1. Put flour into a mixing bowl and make a well in the center. Pour in beaten eggs, milk, water, salt and oil. With a fork or a whisk, gradually incorporate flour into the combined liquids until smooth. Cover the bowl and let rest about 1 hour. The batter will be runny and light, which helps it to spread evenly when it hits the pan.

2. Place a non-stick, 7-8 inch skillet or seasoned crepe pan over medium heat and put in the butter. Pour off excess melted butter into the batter. When butter sizzles, tilt the pan slightly, and ladle in about 3 tablespoons batter rotating the pan, which forces the batter to run evenly across the bottom. (This sounds tricky but you will get the knack of it after a crepe or two, and don't worry if you lose some, there's plenty.) Cook each crepe until edges are bubbly and underside is lightly browned and lacy, about a minute or so. Carefully turn the crepe and cook about 20 seconds longer. This second side will be less attractive than the first. Making crepes is fun and once you get going you can make a pile of them. Transfer crepes to a platter, slightly overlapping them.

3. If you are not using the crepes within an hour or so, stack them with a square of wax paper between each one. Wrap the stack in aluminum foil to securely cover and freeze up to one month. Or cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate overnight.

To make the sauce:

Put the chocolate in a bowl. Place the cream in a small saucepan and bring to a boil. Pour over the chocolate and stir until smooth. Return the mixture to the saucepan and simmer for a few minutes until smooth and creamy. (The sauce can be made ahead and refrigerated up to one week. To serve, heat sauce over very low heat until melted.

To serve, fold the crepes into quarters with lacy side exposed. Overlap 2 or 3 on a plate and drizzle over the warm chocolate sauce.

Edible Aphrodisiacs, Past And Present

"I will show you a philter without potions, without herbs, without any witches' incantations - if you wish to be loved, love." -Seneca

If only it was that easy. Then again, perhaps it was back in Seneca's Roman days: festivals, orgies and such, being the common form of daily amusement. Sadly, with the demise of the empire so went their easy loving ways, crushed beneath the steadfast abstinence of Christianity, which itself was briefly subverted in the free-loving '60s, only to disappear again when the hangover hit.

Realistically, it's never been all that easy to get good lovin' (and it's notoriously difficult to keep the good lovin' coming once you find some). This was probably recognized around the time that cavemen discovered it wasn't always easy to get the cavegirl of his choice back to the cave. He soon discovered, however, that a box of chocolates and some oysters were as useful on a date as a club - and thus was born the notion of aphrodisiacs.

The name is derived from the Greek goddess of love, Aphrodite, and there are more myths and legends surrounding aphrodisiacs than facts. The FDA has never reported that any substance has a profound, clinically detectable effect on the libido of men or women. With that said, scientists have reported increased blood flow to the places where you want increased blood flow when men smelled cinnamon buns, roasted meat and cheese pizza (and chocolate, strawberry, vanilla, peppermint and... well, it's a long list). Are we horny or hungry?

Probably a bit of both, because there are a staggering number of foods that are said to have libidinous effects. Oysters are probably the most commonly known aphrodisiac; it's said Casanova would consume fifty in his morning bath with his lover du jour. Serve them raw, chilled with a touch of lemon, preferably off your lover's stomach. Clams and scallops are other favorites and the legumes are not to be left out. Asparagus, cucumber, celery and chilies (nothing phallic about these, right?) are all believed to have varying degrees of potency. Pine nuts are believed to set lovers swooning in the Mediterranean and avocados come highly recommended as well. Don't forget the strawberries and a nice bottle of bubbly to go with them.

If the romance needs to be turned up another notch, try spices, a variety of which are said to do the trick. Cardamom, cloves, ginger, nutmeg, saffron and even salt and pepper have, at one time or another, all been used to try and turn timid affections into tempestuous ones. The smell of chocolate, vanilla and peppermint are also pleasant options which, if nothing else, will have the boudoir smelling better. If none of these work, there are always the traditional options. Diamonds seem to work wonders and among the less conventional solutions, the genitals of various animals are said to have aphrodisiac properties. Among them are deer (readily available in the area) and tigers (hard to find in the area at this time of year). My advice? Stick with the jewels.

Perhaps there is some truth to old Seneca's quote after all. To really get your lover's libido in high gear, maybe some good old-fashioned loving is all you need. In other words, give to get. Some oysters, an avocado, a few strawberries, some chocolate and a bottle of champers would probably help, too. And if all else fails, try wearing a pair of riding chaps and nothing else. I hear this works great.

Inter Courses: An Aphrodisiac Cookbook is a great resource, with recipes and brief histories of a variety of aphrodisiacs. Available from Terrace Publishing for $24.95 Call 1-800-372-2311 or try Amazon.com

Dining in The Hamptons

Love is in the air, so let the foie gras fly....

Angelo Monte and executive chef Christopher von Eissler of Gurney's Inn have put together a charming, très French Valentine's Day menu, complete with confections from patissier extraordinaire Bill Bertha. The complete dinner for two, which includes a bottle of Korbel champagne, is just $110. Merci, Gurney's!

Chef Todd Jacobs at Tierra Mar wants to get you in the mood, too. He's cooked up a five course Valentine's Day aphrodisiac menu. It's $65 per person and it's available from 6 to 10 p.m. February 14. If you can't make it on Thursday, Tierra is having a special dinner dance on Friday, February 15. There will be a buffet from 8:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. and music and dancing from Oscar Gonzales and Krompfer Entertainment. The cost is $35 per person. Tierra also continues their wine tasting series Saturday, February 9 with a "Vegetarian Cheese and Pasta Dinner with Young California Varietals." The dinner begins at 7 p.m. and features a 4-course dinner paired with wines for $65 per person plus tax and gratuity. Call (631) 288-2700 for reservations.

The Maidstone Arms' "Dinner for Lovers" on February 14 is a three-course prix fixe for two with a long stem rose for the lady and a boutonniere for the gentleman for $98. Seatings are at 6 and 9 p.m. The Maidstone also has an edible gift you can purchase

Side Dish By Aji Jones

(great for Moms): special gift baskets filled with products from their own line, "Maidstones," priced at $35 and $60. Maidstone chef Paul del Favero also continues his "Tour de France" with a special dinner featuring the food and wine of the burgundy region on February 10. Call 324-5006 to order gift baskets and make dinner reservations.

Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyards on the North Fork are getting in on the Valentine's Day action, too. At Bedell, you can buy four bottles of their Raspberry Wine for a 10% discount or a case for 15% off. At Corey Creek you can purchase "wine and romance" gift baskets featuring different wines and chocolates. Yum! Maybe Bedell & Corey owner Michael Lynne will be treating his Lord of the Rings cast....

Dinner for two at American Bistro on Valentine's Day is $50 per person (including a glass of bubbly) and chef Riccardo Traslavina has cooked up a special menu for the occasion.

Pacific East will offer their $19.99 three-course prix fixe all evening on February 14. Diners who order off the regular menu (not the prix fixe) will receive a complimentary glass of champagne and the ladies will each receive a rose.

Cooking at home for the big day? Inspiration is on hand: Peter Mantone is guest chef for the next new episode of "Eat at Joe's" on LTV & NYC actress Valerie David is guest host. Peter is chef and owner of Gemini Catering in Manhattan. They create gourmet in-home meals for clients such as Joan Collins and Gene Hackman. The show airs on Tuesday, February 12 at 5 a.m. Friday, February 15 at 8:30 p.m. and Saturday, February 16 at 1:30 p.m.

The Crazy Dog in Westhampton Beach will reopen for the season on Valentine's Day... And La Fondita in Amagansett will close for winter vacation from Monday, February 11 through Tuesday, April 16.

North Fork news: William Valentine, formerly of the Maidstone Arms, has been appointed consulting chef at The Seafood Barge in Southold. Daily kitchen duties will continue under the supervision of kitchen director Christine Aw, a six-year veteran of the Barge's kitchen.

The dish hears that... Newswomen Lynn Sherr and Joan Hamburg were seen dining at Nick and Toni's together recently.

Fun Foodie Fact: Newsday food writer Erica Marcus is cousin to WOR foodie Arthur Schwartz.

Cosmetic Lunchtime Lift

In 1981 Elizabeth Taylor disappeared for three weeks. There was some idle speculation about where she may have gone and what she may have been doing, but when she did reappear, her face was smoother and younger looking than it had been just weeks ago. Mystery solved.

In those days, cosmetic surgery was an involved affair that left the patient looking like they had gone fifteen rounds with Rocky. Today, people who want to look younger don't have to jet off to Switzerland for three weeks; they can simply skip the tuna salad and head to Dr. Covey at East End Laser Care for a simple and non-invasive procedure during their lunch hour.

People have always wanted to look better longer and with the advances that have been made in cosmetic surgery they can now achieve this end without significant "down time" from their jobs and family. Non-invasive lasers along with botox and soft tissue fillers, like collagen, can make people look years younger without the need for more invasive surgical procedures. And many of these cosmetic treatments can be done in less time than it takes to get a manicure.

Every time she looked in the mirror Ms. Anderson noticed the fine wrinkles across her forehead and the deep crevices in between her eyes. At forty-three she felt as though she always looked worried and tense. Furthermore, she was beginning to see the squint lines (crows feet) around her eyes worsen every time she smiled. On a recent lunch hour, she visited Dr. Alexander Covey, medical director of East End Laser Care, who studied the lines in her face and then performed an NLITE non-invasive laser procedure, which gradually rebuilt the collagen layer underneath her skin and softened the wrinkles around her eyes. Dr. Covey then injected botox via a tiny needle into Ms. Anderson's forehead which over the next weeks, removed the lines and erased her tired angry look. After less than an hour, she returned to her job, her face rejuvenated.

Mr. Smith, a landscaper, had always been bothered by the hair on his back. He routinely shaved his back and sometimes had it waxed, but these solutions were time consuming and the hair always returned a few weeks later. A little research led him to East End Laser Care for laser hair removal treatment. He rested on a treatment table while the hair removal laser comfortably destroyed hundreds of hair follicles. Any unwanted body hair can be removed using this process and following his procedure his wife had a laser hair removal treatment

About Face.....with Annette

VALENTINE'S DAY FACTS

Did you know that the current popularity of St. Valentine's Day owes much to the modern postal service? Until the mid-1800s, the cost of sending mail was far beyond the means of the average person. Even worse, the postal service demanded payment from the recipient of the letter and not the sender! Imagine receiving a valentine card, paying the postage due, then reading that you were "valued beyond rubies." Even more ironic: discovering that your valentine card was from an unwelcome suitor! So, until the advent of the penny post, most valentine cards were hand delivered by the prospective lover.

St. Valentine's Day greeting cards are still very popular (second only to Christmas cards), but red roses and chocolate candies now often accompany the card. And the card itself has changed quite a bit. Recent developments include cards that play romantic music, let you record a romantic message and there are even scratch-and-sniff cards! New technologies offer even more ways for lovers to say "Be mine!" Take advantage of these new technologies and videotape a steamy Valentine wish! Send a love letter via email! Send an animated eCard! It's fun and easy to do! A great email site is www.lovingyou.com for a sweet Valentine message.

As long as love is in the air why not take a peek at the adorable line of heart shaped lip glosses from Pupa, Mini Cuore (mini-heart) gloss. It will leave the lips with lots of shine and shimmer and a subtle hint of color. Make his heart beat a little faster with Shimmering Pink, Shimmering Grape, Pearly Violet and Pearly Bordeaux. ($12.50)

Another way to knock all those little Cupids out of the sky is by dipping their arrows into Not Soap, Radio Collection. Infused with a powerfully blended ginseng extract to activate pheromones - va-va-va-voom! Great super-charged aphrodisiac bubbles for the bath and shower that will command his attention! Love is in the air, and don't we need it?? Tony and Tina introduces Sage and Love Boost Herbal Aromatherapy Bath and Body Gel. There are so many ways to share love, so many gift options and remember, whatever we give out, we get back, so give, give, give! Set the night to music and pick up Tony and Tina's Sage Stick. Once it is lit, it will cleanse your surroundings and free you of negative blocks. And, did you know love boosts the immune system, touch increases the calming hormone Oxytocin, love decreases the stress hormone Cortisol and kissing burns calories? The very first Valentine (sent by Dr. Valentinus on February 14, 270 AD), is believed to have restored the sight of its blind recipient. Hmmm, with all that knowledge you have now, go forth and hint, hint, hint or spend, spend, spend! Have a wonderful Valentine's Day!

Our Southampton Hospital : Splashes Of Hope

"We are working hard to make a visit to our hospital a good experience," explained Kevin Spiegel, the senior vice president and COO of Southampton Hospital. "We take away your clothes, we put you in a bed and we tell you when to eat. Hospitals have to have a routine, but we must continue to do more to make patients more comfortable and this is especially true when we are dealing with children."

The latest innovation at Southampton Hospital is the murals that now brighten walls around the nursing station on the pediatric unit, which deals with some 150 patient admissions a year, the majority of which are children under twelve years old. The murals colorfully depict scenes of nautical whimsy appropriate for our region and are the work of a Sayville-based, not for profit organization, appropriately named Splashes of Hope.

Splashes of Hope was founded by a local artist, Heather Buggee, who explained how, during her training at the Connecticut Institute of Art, a friend and fellow student developed Hodgkin's Disease from which he later died. Heather subsequently volunteered in a hospital in Valhalla and she became convinced that there had to be an alternative to the traditionally drab hospital atmospheres and from this developed her concept of painting themed murals to enhance and enliven waiting rooms, exam areas and group living homes.

Since its foundation in 1966, Splashes of Hope have appeared in hospitals such as Mount Sinai in Manhattan, Boston Children's Hospital and in Long Island at Stony Brook and Good Samaritan hospitals. They even traveled to Odessa in the remote Ukraine to paint a mural in an orphanage.

Tom Kerr was last year's President of the Westhampton Rotary Club and he was there at the District Assembly when Splashes of Hope made a presentation. Tom has an adopted daughter who was born in Korea and he was moved by the presentation, especially when he saw the work done in the Ukraine. He committed the Rotary Club to funding the painting of these murals at Southampton Hospital as part of their Community Services activities.

The larger of the murals, designed by Doug Raina, a volunteer who works for Computer Associates, depicts a scene of boats and fishermen done with great style and humor using vibrant colors, which really lift your spirits. The mural on an adjacent wall has been created in the spirit of a well-known painting by Winslow Homer.

Kevin Spiegel spoke about how Southampton Hospital is working hard to remove fears that may be lurking in a child's mind when going into hospital. "This is a combination of holistic therapy together with attention to the environment. We are totally committed to providing the utmost in quality care and we are always looking at ways of reducing the trauma felt by patients and their families. Artwork by Heather Buggee and her colleagues have given us through this wonderful gift from Westhampton Rotary Club helps to bring a sense of joy and peace and we are all so very grateful to everyone who has made this project possible"

These comments were amplified by some of the children who have already experienced the power of murals to ease the stress of illness and being in hospital. When you read comments such as: "I forgot when they were going to give me a needle because I was staring at the bunny on the wall," made by an eight year-old, or the young leukemia patient at another hospital who said how he found the murals to be an inspiration, "Especially the whales splashing and jumping in the air." It makes you very thankful that the combination of talented artists, such as Heather Buggee and her Splashes of Hope team, and the Westhampton Rotary Club have brought these murals to our community hospital. By the way, if there are any potential donors out there, Southampton Hospital still has many walls and rooms that could look so much brighter. At a cost of around $50 a square foot this can be a very reasonable way to bringing Splashes of Hope into the lives of sick children and to help speed their recovery.

Conservatories: Melding Interiors And Exteriors

I lived in London for a mere six months and one of the many things I miss about England is its beautiful gardens. I don't mean to discriminate. I have certainly seen equally lovely gardens in the Hamptons, but people in the UK and, all of Europe for that matter, truly know how to immerse themselves in their gardens by building conservatories. That is, they soak in the ambience of the nature they have so lovingly manipulated all year-round.

In America, unfortunately, our knowledge and use of conservatories generally doesn't extend beyond sunrooms and greenhouses. With a little information, we can easily bridge the gap between the interior of our homes and the natural world, creating a psychologically healthy and sound atmosphere. To this end, Paul Avis moved from England to Huntington, Long Island to put eighteen years of experience and his skills as an architectural design consultant in the conservatory industry to good use. He was having lunch with Russell Ireland, Jr., President of Hampton Conservatories (which has just united with North West Joinery), who convinced him to bring his talent in designing and promoting traditional Old World European conservatories to America.

Paul explained that there are, several aspects of Hampton Conservatories that make it a unique company. Every one of the company's projects is custom designed, manufactured and built to suit the client's needs. The integrity of the landscape is preserved by designing the structure to complement the style of the adjoining property.

Conservatories can be made to complement any style home: Victorian, a quaint cottage, a country manor or raised ranch alike. Along with every project the company offers, which include conservatories, pool enclosures, club houses, greenhouses and roof lanterns, architectural and design consultants from the UK and US will work with both homeowners and professionals, from initial design all the way through to the installation of the structure. They will also act as a nominated sub-contractor. Since each project is individually designed and created by the clients, options are unlimited.

An example of Hampton Conservatories' work

These one of a kind designs are manufactured in the company's main workshops in Portrush, Northern Ireland, out of fine materials such as mahogany, hardwoods, PVC or aluminum. Double-glazed safety glass, rather than plastic is used in construction and is available in a variety of tints to ensure temperature control. Roof ventilation and rain sensor systems aide in temperature control as well, and fly screens and blinds can also be installed. Building materials are fully treated before leaving the workshop. Woodwork is either stained or painted with a low-gloss, water based paint, since it lasts two to three times longer than ordinary paint. The in-house designers have produced a wide range of decorative and structural braces, metal brackets, finials, roof crestings and floor grids, based on historical examples. They meet strict engineering guidelines and environmental conditions. "Climactic conditions in America differ from those in Europe, in that we experience a wider range of temperatures here," Paul explained. "Hampton Conservatories has developed structures to fit these conditions."

Another advantage of working with the company is its affiliation with Martin Viette Nurseries in East Norwich, NY and Ireland-Gannon Associates, landscape designers, with offices in East Norwich and Stony Brook, NY. This allows customers the opportunity for advice on manually and electrically operated solar blinds, heating and cooling methods, misting systems and landscape design. Furniture, flooring and lighting needs are conveniently met as well. Some people, myself included, are very visual and would prefer to see a model to get the full effect of the varying styles of conservatories.

It so happens that three show conservatories are being built at Hampton Conservatories, main office at 490 New York Avenue in Huntington and another is in progress at Martin Viette Nurseries on Route 25A in East Norwich. These, along with a new design office in Ireland, are due to be completed at the end of March. "Europe has a history of conservatories," Paul said. Paul and his colleagues hope to spark the beginnings of a history of conservatories here in America. He hopes to make these wonderful structures familiar to Americans through education and promotion - maybe then we will be able to fully appreciate our gardens here in the Hamptons 365 days a year as they do in England. And Paul will stop getting phone calls asking if he gives music lessons!

POLICE BLOTTER

No, IGA doesn't stand for "I got arrested." But it could have for an unidentified grocery-getter, who was seen going out the entrance of the Amagansett IGA with a cart full of unbagged groceries. Witnesses called police as an IGA employee ran after the man who pushed his cart of stolen goodies to his 1994 Ford pickup. The man then hopped inside as his partner, who was waiting in the truck, got out and ran. The $376.78 worth of groceries was recovered and returned to their rightful place. The thief, however, got away.

Thieves have sunken to a new level in North Sea. There is now a price paid for "hot" air... bags, that is. Police responded to a call from a Major's Path resident who said the air bag was stolen from her car while it was parked in her driveway.

Could it be true? A sighting of ancient aboriginal life on the East End? No, it was just another naked guy on the dunes of Wiborg's Beach in East Hampton. Numerous sightings of the illustrious Manus Nakedous have been reported since last summer, but the most recent came last Friday night from a local resident. Police still have no suspects.

A Fort Washington Avenue resident returned home after a thirty-day leave to find her car where she left it at the Amagansett train station. She then noticed that the license plates had been stolen. Police arrived to investigate, but still have no suspects.

Most will agree, there's nothing like a Sunday morning walk on the beach while spring-like weather makes an appearance in early February. And all will agree, there's nothing like coming back from your leisurely walk to find your bag, containing $400, personal items, a $300 camera and a $100 pair of sunglasses, missing from your unlocked car. This is what police realized at the end of Ocean Road in Bridgehampton last week after a Snake Hollow Road resident, returning from her walk, discovered the theft.

In a perfect world no man would have to lock up his roofing supplies after a hard day's work. But this is hardly a perfect world. A builder called police last week to report the theft of shingles from a construction sight in East Hampton, where he been contracted to work. Investigation lead responding officers to another sight where they found two suspects and all the shingles, which the complainant identified as the stolen goods. The two men were placed under arrest and the shingles were held for evidence.

Montauk police arrived at a South Fairview Avenue residence when a housesitter discovered there had been a break-in. The owner of the house was away on vacation when unknown individuals entered his abode by breaking the lock on a rear door and proceeded to vandalize his kitchen. In the process, they drank his wine, Beefeater and Bacardi and broke a chair. Police have no leads as to whom these Viking-like intruders may be.

Another call to Montauk police resulted in a motorist paying for a broken window at the Royal Atlantic Beach Resort. An employee of the weekend getaway dialed the cops when two pickup trucks were seen tearin' it up in the gravel parking lot. In the process, a window was shattered by flying debris, which one of the drivers agreed to pay for.

CORRECTION: An incident at the United Artists Movie Theater, recorded in last week's police blotter as the Hampton Bays location, actually occurred at the East Hampton location.

Dan's LETTERS

A TRULY FINE DESIGN

Dear Dan,

Thank you for the wonderful article about Southampton Hospital's ambulatory care facilities. As the designers of the Westhampton Beach Primary Care and Radiology Centers, the sports Rehab Centers (all mentioned in the article), it is gratifying to know that the facilities we design are well received by those they serve.

It may be interesting to note that, while the Dialysis Center is now hailed as "remarkable," the administration at Southampton Hospital that replaced John Ferry (who retained Avatar East to design the aforementioned facilities) ridiculed the building and its interiors as "over-designed." However, since our directive had been to create a "first-class" facility, we strove to do just that.

It is good to know that we succeeded.

VICTIMS ONE AND ALL

Dear Dan,

I am writing this letter in the hope of making people aware of a sad situation that has occurred in the wake of 9/11.

Much media attention has been focused on the dollar amounts of settlements that will be made to the survivors of those lost in this horrific event.

We have been asked to open our hearts and our wallets to the Red Cross, Americares and other organizations that will provide much needed monetary support for orphaned children, pregnant mothers and other survivors in need. It has come to my attention through an article in Newsday that there is one equally important group that seems to be overlooked.

There are more than two dozen, same sex life partners who in an instant, not only lost much needed income but also their identity as a surviving family member. Legally, they have no right to any settlement and are not even being recognized as survivors or next of kin. I hope people will see this and be as outraged as I was when I discovered these facts.

I see the solution to this problem as a two-stage process. The first step is to set aside funds to take care of these people. The second step and long term goal must be the legalization of same sex unions so this never has to happen to anyone again.

My children have attended Southampton College and are now part of the East Hampton community. They have seen what the generosity and support of their neighbors has accomplished for so many needed causes.

My hope is that this letter will open people's eyes so they can become part of a solution to a problem that has been overlooked for far too long.

THE SUN RISES IN THE EAST. MAYBE

Dear Dan,

I have been following your story about the sun not being "on time" and I should have written earlier: now a reader has criticized you for trying to watch sunsets from the East Coast. As a very amateur celestial navigator, I pay attention to these things. On some earth globes you will see a figure 8 diagram called an analemma and it is a graph of the sun's daily schedule as it moves around the earth. (Yes, that is the way we geocentric navigators look at all of the stars and planets.) In late February the sun crosses your spot on the beach fourteen minutes later than the average Local Apparent Noon. In early November each year it maxes out at sixteen minutes early. This explains why, as our days get longer after December 21, we still don't get an earlier sunrise until about ten days later. This varying sun-clock phenomenon is called the equation of time.

The sun also wanders north and south of the equator 23 degrees during the four seasons; this is called declination. The sun will rise and set exactly east and west only when it is over the equator with a declination of zero. Around the tropics this is hardly noticeable but when you travel up our way or way up to Alaska you start to notice some radical changes in length of day and also where on the horizon the sun rises and sets. Even with Long Island's slant from true East and West, you accurately stated the you can see the sun set over the Southwest ocean for a few months in the winter. As a North Fork native, I have only a few days where I can catch a "true" sunrise (meaning the sun is coming right out of the sea) I have to rise early in the summer and travel to a point in East Marion and look towards Fisher's Island.

Everyone should look out at the sky at night and become an amateur Galileo. You will probably notice some things such as: The stars rise and set about 4 minutes earlier each day. The moon comes up about an hour later each day. The sun reaches its highest point in the sky when it is directly south of you. You can see sunrises and sunsets from the East Coast, you don't have to go to California.

on her upper lip and chin.

Mrs. Piedmont hated the blood vessels in her nose and cheeks which resulted from both a cosmetic condition called rosacea and countless hours of sunbathing. She is fifty-two and had recently noticed deepening smile lines which made her look and feel much older. Dr. Covey used a pencil-sized laser handpiece to erase the blood vessels from Mrs. Piedmont's face. Afterwards, he injected collagen into her smile lines with a small needle.

In less than an hour, she was on her way back home but without the facial blood vessels and deep smile lines.

All of these procedures are simple and effective and produce results that will have you looking better and feeling better about your appearance. A quick trip or two to Dr. Covey's office and you can be free of unwanted wrinkles and hair with very little risk involved. Then you can take that trip to Switzerland for the scenery, not the surgery.

If you would like more information about lasers for wrinkle reduction, hair removal, facial vein and blemish removal or botox, collagen and microdermabrasion treatments, call the offices of Alexander Covey, M.D. at East End Laser Care 878-9200 in Center Moriches, 287-6662 in Southampton or visit them at www.eastendlasercare.com. Dr. Covey is a Diplomate of the American Board of Laser Surgery and a Fellow of the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgeons.

KINGDOM ON THE OCEAN

This oceanfront masterpiece is located in the gold coast area of Dune Road in the Village of Westhampton Beach. A series of interacting curves provide fabulous ocean and bay views from its many glass walls and private decks. The main level offers a spacious and dramatic living room with fireplace and soaring ceilings, a dining room, eat-in kitchen, two guest bedrooms, media room; plus a junior master suite that opens to pool and beach. The second floor master suite with fireplace and sundeck overlooks the ocean, along with a very sensual spa-bath overlooking the bay. A sitting room and artists' studio also offers a private deck. A guest room, maid's room, gym, media room, sauna and garage complete the lower level. The gorgeous 20 x 40 foot oval heated gunite pool/spa area with a fully equipped cabana and a dramatic walkway to the ocean beach gives this house that certain wonderful feeling. Exclusively listed with Ann Ciardullo, Listing Broker (631) 288-1050, ext.21 — Folio #9151.
